

Claims

1. A method of producing a bakery product with addition of herbal substances to improve the condition of sick people consist in adding either finely ground herbs or water, oil, or alcohol-based solutions of herbal substances into the dough during dough kneading before the process of baking begins.
2. A method of producing a bakery product with addition of herbal substances consist of two sequential actions:
 - 2.1. The first action consist in preparing an oil-based solution of herbal substances.
 - 2.2. The second action consists in applying the above mentioned oil-based solution to the surface of bakery products after the process of baking is complete. A cracker is used as a sponge that absorbs the oil-based solution of herbal substances.
3. A method of producing a bakery product to improve the condition of sick people consist of three sequential actions:
 - 3.1. The first action consists in preparing an alcohol-based solution of herbal substances.
 - 3.2. The second action consists in applying the above mentioned alcohol-based solution to the surface of bakery products after the process of baking is complete. This method, similarly to the second method, allows to use a bakery product as a sponge the alcohol that absorbs-ion of herbal substancesbased solut.
 - 3.3. The third action consists in evaporating alcohol from the surface of a cracker at the temperature from 40C to 150°C.